

Discovering your reputation

Imagine that you walk into a room filled with your friends, family and co-workers. Scan the crowd and identify the person whom you admire the most. What is it about them that you admire?

If you asked that group of family, friends and co-workers whom they admire, would they choose you?

We don't need to be admired by everyone- but this is a great exercise to start discovering the reputation that we've built for ourselves.
