

We shape our own character

There are so many things in life we can't control – whether we're beautiful or smart, whether we had good parents or bad, whether we grew up with affirmation or negation – it's uplifting to remember that nothing but moral will power is needed to make us better.