

Does helping hurt?

Sometimes, well-intentioned plans have unintended consequences.

Teaching fairness

Kids can often complain that things “aren’t fair” when things don’t work out as they want. One way to help teach fairness is to promote compromise.

How to help kids make new friends at school

Since it can sometimes be hard to become friends with new classmates, we can help students by encouraging them to get to know one another better. Here are a list of questions that can help students get to know one another better.

Back to school – back to basics

For me, every school year and every new experience brings both excitement and anxiety for what is to come.